FRANKLIN LA Jan 3—Forty-eight hours before the time set for their execution, Mrs Ada Bonner Lebouef and Dr T J Dreher conspirators in the slaying of the former s husband learned today that their last slim hope had flickered away

I guess that s our last chance gone said Dr Dreher when he learned of the chief executive s decision Mrs Lebouef did not speak but turned her face and gazed out of the window of her cell

A close study of the case a parallel to the famous Gray Snyder murder was made by Governor Long before he finally came to his decision His reconsideration of the case came as a result of the state pardon board s recommendation that he extend executive mercy to the doomed couple

The pardon board in an earlier decision refused to recommend executive clemency for the conspirator slayers When it was announced the pardon board would grant Mrs Lebouef and Dr Dreher a second hearing Governor Long announced that regardless of what their decision might be, he would not intervene in the double execution

Reconsiders Case

However the governor did reconsider the case and for the past few days he has reviewed the voluminous transcript of testimony at their trial and the pardon board hearings and last night from Baton Rouge, the state capital he announced that he

Oscar Gast, Marion county probate-judge elect who will take office on Feb. 9, has qualified by taking the oath and filing bond as required by law.

The oath of office was administered recently by Judge Scofield of the court of common pleas. Judge-elect Gast has filed $5,000 bond, which has been approved by the prosecuting attorney and county commissioners and is now on file with the county treasurer.

Gast spent the greater part of the last six weeks in Cincinnati, where he acquainted himself with probate and juvenile court procedure in the Hamilton county court. He expects to visit several other counties before taking office.

One Spoonful Would Fill A Market Basket!

HERE is a secret for the benefit of one's inner system. There is as much good to a single spoon of plain pepsin syrup as in a whole basket of fresh vegetables!

You have heard how modern menus fail to assist the peristaltic action so important to health. Make this up with a little syrup pepsin, and watch appetite, assimilation, and elimination pick up! It ought to improve 100% in a week, according to some doctors.

Don't give up rich foods, or go on a diet when this liquid vegetable corrective can put stomach, liver, and bowels in condition to handle anything that's eaten! Without the sign of distress, or a fear of constipation. You don't have to purge yourself to keep the digestive tract all clean and sweet. A ten-day test of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin will prove this. And the test is at present free. Children are healthier and happier, and elderly people have a far easier time where this ideal combination of laxative herbs and pure pepsin is fully appreciated.

Dr. Caldwell first used this innocent means of keeping the bowels free from accumulated waste back in 1875. Today, you couldn't find a druggist without this famous prescription, all put up and directions enclosed. Try it, and you'll know why!

A trial of this famous prescription costs nothing if you use the coupon:

"RADIO-TELEPHONE" NOT PLANNED HERE

New Device Possible in Marion Only in Event of Demand from Citizens

There is only slight possibility of Marion having the new "radio-telephone," according to a statement made today by Arthur J. Berry, manager of the Ohio Associated Telephone Co.

However, if citizens of Marion show there is enough interest in the new service to warrant installation, serious consideration of inaugurating it here will be given by officials of the company, Berry indicated.

At the present time the system has been installed in practically all sections of the state, its operation being especially popular in Northern Ohio, the district headed by Frank Knapp, of Bellevue.

Some Ohio towns listed as having "radio over telephone" are Lorain, Bellevue, Sidney, Galion, Norwalk and Lima. Troy is about ready to enter the field and Portsmouth has just completed its first installation.

Rates range from $2 to $3 a month for the service plus $10 installation fees.

According to Berry there is not a great difference in the expense of a private home radio and the telephone combination, taking all items of cost into consideration. The radio-telephone is a separate device from the telephone itself and in no way interferes with use of the telephone for conversational purposes.

One disadvantage of the "radio telephone" is that the home using it must accept the programs selected by the telephone company, while persons having their own radios have the entire field of broadcasting to select from. The programs from the telephone company are varied as much as possible, however, Berry states.

BANK TELLER HELD FOR EMBEZZLEMENT

Painesville Man Says He Took Money To Purchase "Good Liquor"

PAINESVILLE, Jan. 3—Alleged to have embezzled more than $10,000 from the Painesville branch of the Cleveland Trust Co., Charles S. Butler, 42, teller in the bank, was held in the Lake county jail here today.

The arrest was made last night by Russell V. Bleecker, head of the Cleveland office of the Pinkerton Detective Agency. Bleecker came here, he said, after irregularities were discovered in Butler's accounts yesterday afternoon. He went immediately to the teller's home and the accused man admitted, he said, embezzling "a sum of money," though he refused to say definitely how much. The embezzlements have gone on over a period of two years, according to the reported confession.

John T. Shibley, head of the safety department of the Cleveland Trust Co., accompanied the Pinkerton detective. When asked what he had done with the money, according to Bleecker and Shibley, Butler replied that he had spent most of it "for good liquor."

When his questioners observed that this was an unusual amount to spend for liquor the teller did not answer, they said. The shortage will total at least $10,000, according to Shibley.

RAIL WORLD EYES VALUATION CASE

Outcome May Determine Value for Rate-Making Purposes

WASHINGTON, Jan. 3—Eyes of the railroad and financial world turned to the supreme court today as it tackled the so-called "fifteen billion dollar valuation case," the outcome of which may determine the ultimate value for rate-making purposes of all American railroads. The argument began today.

Two small railroads operating 14 miles of main line track in St. Louis and suburbs furnish the basis for an attack upon the interstate commerce commission's theory of valuation and rate-making and the recapture clause of the Esch-Cummins law of 1920.

These railroads are the St. Louis and O'Fallon and the Manufacturers, owned chiefly by the Adolphus Busch estate.

GETS SPEEDING START

COLUMBUS, Jan. 3—Although the new domestic relations court of Franklin county was open only a half day yesterday, six divorce cases were filed. It was revealed from the records today. This new court opened for business the first time yesterday afternoon instead of in the morning because Judge E. V. Mahaffey was unable to be present until late in the day, due to the illness of his mother.

PAIR DOOMED, LAST HOPE IS DIMMED

Mrs Ada Lebouef and Dr. Dreher Due To Face Calhoun Saturday

had made up his mind and would not interfere with the sentence of the court

Women's club organizations 11 of the 12 jurors who brought in the hanging verdict newspaper reporters who covered the Lebouef Dreher trial and individuals in every walk of life flooded the chief executive with appeals to save the conspirator slayers from the gallows There had been threats against his life if he permitted the hangings or if he stopped them

Trapper Given Life

One of the principal grounds on which many of the appeals were based was that Jim Beelle a trapper who was tried with Mrs Lebouef and Dr Dreher and who pleaded guilty to the actual commission of the crime was given a life sentence They contended that the same sentence should have been meted out to all

The crime for which Mrs Lebouef and Dr Dreher were sentenced to hang went down in Louisiana criminal annals as one of the most revolting on record The dismembered body of James L Lebouef was found July 1 1924 in Lake Pontchartrain five days after he had been killed His body had been stuffed with iron slugs to keep it from rising

TREATY SUPPORTERS ARE NEAR VICTORY

Treaty Appears Sure of Ratification Before Cruiser Bill Action

lating the compact Administration leaders opposed the resolution on the ground the conditional ratification was unnecessary and that all American rights were protected under the treaty

Obstacles in Navy Path

The decision to consider the treaty before the naval bill will throw fresh obstacles in the path of enactment for the latter measure Large groups of partisans while endorsing the treaty have opposed the naval bill which authorizes the construction of 15 new cruisers and a giant aircraft carrier Opponents of the bill have declared the United States would be subjected to charges of hypocrisy if after ratifying a treaty to outlaw all war it began strengthening the navy

The administration proposed the increase in cruisers in order to bring America's cruiser strength closer to that of Great Britain Even with the construction of 15 new warships the United States would still have a navy weaker than that of Great Britain The increase was advocated on the grounds that America must be prepared in event of war to rid seas of treaties. Administration backers pointed to the fact of Belgium in 1914 as indicating the value of a treaty when war clouds loom

Vare Case Looms

While the treaty advocates predict early ratification their plans may be jeopardized by the Vare case in which the seating of Senator-elect William S Vare Republican of Pennsylvania The Reed slush fund committee will meet tomorrow to consider Vare's case and there is strong likelihood that the committee will recommend an immediate decision by the senate Vare was denied the oath of office in December 1927 and ever since then has stood on the senator at sidelines a senator without a seat

HEALTH TROUBLE QUICKLY ENDED BY NEW KONJOLA

For Years His Condition Resisted Every Effort for Relief—New Medicine Triumphs

"Konjola was the first and only medicine to touch my case!" How often this expression is heard from those who have found new and glorious health in this master medicine of 32 ingredients Read what a happy experience Mr W L Wolford, 642 John street, Coshocton, Ohio, had with this super remedy:

"What Konjola did in my case is little short of miraculous. For years I was a helpless victim of stomach and liver troubles I had dizzy spells, specks before my eyes, my food did not digest, and my system was filled with poisons. A friend said 'Take Konjola and get well.' But I had lost faith in medicines and prescriptions and treatments; all had failed me. But he insisted that I take Konjola, and I did. It was the first and only medicine that touched my case; the medicine I should have had years ago. In three weeks every trouble had disappeared. I can eat anything, my dizzy spells and black specks are no more, and I am a new man in health, strength and vitality. The new discovery Konjola, with its amazing ... medicine certainly ... was talking about ... different than any other ... in this section. It ... ...

Anne Nichols says "Abie's Irish Rose" is nothing like "Romeo and Juliet," which may be taken as an honest effort on her part to vindicate "Romeo and Juliet."

"Posse Hunts Bootlegger Who Shot Police Raider," reads a headline over a Winnipeg story. What! Bootleggers as desperate as that in a land of government dispensaries!

Anita Loos says that "ninety per cent. of everything that comes out of Hollywood is trash," from which, we take it, that Anita doesn't produce more than ten per cent. of the Hollywood output.

Public Becoming Educated.

Figures tabulated by Dr. Charles Norris, chief medical examiner of New York City, show that there were 1,565 deaths in the metropolis during the year just passed due, directly or indirectly, to liquor, an increase of 256 liquor fatalities over the record of the year preceding it.

Of the 1,565 deaths tabulated, but 130 were set down as deaths from alcoholism, the remaining deaths of the awful total being recorded as homicides, deaths in motor accidents and deaths due to falls, all of them traceable to liquor.

The doctor explains that the probable reason that more deaths from alcoholic poisoning were not reported is that the speakeasies and the bootleggers are supplying a better quality of liquor than formerly; that there is far more doctored ship liquor and far less liquor of the absolutely poisonous kinds made from industrial liquor and wood alcohol. But even though the stuff sold is made from ship liquor, it is awful stuff, being liquor cut down three times, many foreign ingredients being used to cover up the three parts of water it contains.

It was owing to this fact, the doctor explains, that there were so few deaths in New York and so comparatively few cases taken to hospitals as the result of the coming of the new year. But while the liquor now being sold does not so often kill outright as did that purveyed a year or two ago, its effects on the mentalities of the drinkers are no less pronounced. It is fully as effective in leading to folly and crime as the earlier brands dispensed by the bootleggers. As the doctor puts it: "It isn't the liquor that carries them off; it's the foolish things the drinkers do after they carry off the liquor."

The warning of Dr. Norris is that such a thing as pure liquor is practically unknown in New York. Even that secured on the prescriptions of doctors often contains foreign ingredients. The "pure liquor right off the boat" is not pure when it reaches the customer, and the people of New York capable of thinking are coming to a realization of that fact.

As Prohibition Commissioner Doran put it in commenting on the improved holiday conditions in New York in regard to the liquor evil, "the public is becoming educated." This, and the improved formula used by the prohibition department to make alcohol unfit for beverage purposes, have brought about the falling-off in deaths directly due to liquor.

Mussolini Is Called.

If advices from Nice are to be credited, Premier Benito Mussolini, of Italy, must have done his full share of arrogant talking, some threatening, an occasional bit of saber-rattling and gone out of his way to defy several European governments, has been called and made to be good by President Hipolito Irigoyen, of Argentina.

Premier Mussolini, beyond all question, has done a wonderful work in Italy. His accomplishments have been simply amazing. He has wrested Italy from anarchy and established law and order, even though he, in the final analysis, be the law. He has supplanted sloth with industry. He has restored the credit of Italy and stabilized her currency. He has cleaned up the country and put the fear of the law into all that part of her criminal element that he hasn't jailed. He has rebuilt the army of Italy, strengthened her navy, developed her merchant marine, given the country real railroad service, almost entirely revised her system of government, reduced drunkenness and encouraged education, literature and art. His power in Italy is limited only by the limit he himself places on it. Under the circumstances, it is not at all surprising that his self appreciation has been somewhat developed with the result that he has made some manifest mistakes, among them being the announcement, made last spring, that the Fascist government thereafter would hold the children of Italian parents, even though such children be born on foreign soil, to be subjects of Italy, and some citizens of other lands going back to Italy with full authority papers as foreign citizens are said not only to have been held in Italy, but also compelled to do military service.

When a man of Italian blood, a citizen of Argentina, was held in Italy recently in conformity with this Italian nationalism decree, President Yrigoyen met the situation by signing and issuing a decree prohibiting any Italian ship from entering the port of Buenos Aires so long as the Italian nationalism decree was applied to citizens of Argentina. That was a proposition which Mussolini could understand for it touched Italian trade, and the result was Argentinians of Italian blood are no longer held in Italy.

When Chicago police arrested a married man and a young widow in the latter's apartments, Christmas Eve, they found them playing about a Christmas tree full of presents marked "From Popsie to Momsie." That should be enough to convict them.

What wonderful government we would have in this great land of ours if the men in official life only knew half as much as the fellows trying to get their jobs!

Dr. Hubert Work may have felt that it was a duty he owned himself to deny the story that he will urge the naming of a woman for the Hoover cabinet, but the thing is not at all consequential. Mr. Hoover will probably follow his own judgment in the matter, urge or no urge.

Heywood Broun says "a diplomat invariably tries to get three quarters for every half dollar he lays upon the table." Not! No diplomat ever would think of committing the folly of laying half a dollar upon a table were there any other diplomats around.

President Moncada, of Nicaragua, started the new year off right by praising the manner in which our government handled the election down there, but by so doing he probably incurred the ill-will of this country's largest church organization, the parlor pinks, the pacificists, the internationalists, the socialists, communists, the Civil Liberties union and many organizations unfriendly to the United States, if not absolutely disloyal.

Despairing of pulling the Celtic off Cow and Calf rock, so firmly is she grounded the British have decided to cut her into two or three pieces and tow them separately to Queenstown. British persistence may yet save the Celtic to the White Star line.

Word comes indirectly from Natalia Ivanovna, wife of Leon Trotzky, that she, Trotzky and the latter's son are all ill of malaria, are compelled to exist in a stone cold house, that mail and telegrams to them are barred and that Stalin refuses to permit them to change their place of exile to a milder climate. Looks as though Dictator Stalin may be planning murder in the name of "Liberty and Equality."

Criminal Carelessness.

Even should it be developed that the death of Cecil Calbert was the result of a shot intentionally fired through a window of his home and not of a stray bullet fired by some New Year's Eve celebrant, a number of cases have been reported, one in Wednesday's papers from our neighboring state of Indiana, which show the criminal folly of thus celebrating the advent of the new year.

Those who feel that they must greet the coming of a new year with noise should produce it in some other way than using ball cartridges in pistols and guns. Blank cartridges only should be used, if firearms are used at all, but if ball cartridges are used the utmost care should be exercised that the weapon being employed is directed straight down at the ground. A shot fired at the ground at an angle may hit a pavement or other hard object capable of deflecting it and prove as deadly should it hit some citizen as one fired directly at him. And as for firing directly into the air, anybody using a firearm should know that a bullet in its descent is almost as dangerous to life as a bullet in direct range from a gun.

Assuming that the killing of Calbert was an accident, it will not relieve one guilty of such criminal carelessness and indifference to human life from culpability for the young man's death.

Enzymes and Digestion.

BY ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.

During the course of a month I get a great many letters from the readers of these articles. They ask thousands of questions.

The other day came this request: "What is meant by enzymes and hydrolysis? Please tell us."

Of course, I am glad to answer this question and all others that have a bearing on health. In these articles I try to avoid technical discussions, particularly so if the matters have no practical application. It serves no useful purpose to lose your time and mine with the consideration of theoretical questions.

But the enzymes bear such an important relationship to health and nutrition that we can afford to speak of them for a moment.

If you drop a radish in a glass of water it just stays there. Nothing happens to it. If it is taken into the stomach the radish dissolves. What has happened?

The saliva of the mouth and the juices of the stomach and intestines differ from water. These fluids contain chemical or other agents that make possible the physical or chemical change of the things we eat.

Without moisture, without water, the digestion and appropriation of the nourishing parts of the things we eat, would be impossible. One function of the enzymes is to compel water to unite with the organic substances we swallow.

The enzymes act in a sense like yeast. They are not themselves consumed. They act by their presence in such a manner as to permit the water to combine with the food substance.

You see it is really the water that does the work. That is why the process we are discussing is called "hydrolysis."

"Hydro" means "water." "Lysis" means "to split." Hydrolysis, then, is "water splitting."

By the aid and direction of the enzymes, hydrolysis is made possible. In consequence, the radish or other food can be used by the body, because the enzymes promote the hydrolysis of its substance, making it soluble.

You might as well hold a radish in the hand and expect it to be nourishing, as to take it into the cavity of the stomach and expect it to supply your body with fuel and energy. It would not be absorbed at all if it were not for the enzymes and their promotion of hydrolysis. Digestion would be impossible.

There are a number of different enzymes. The 'maltose' of the intestinal juices completes the starch digestion, changing the sugar into glucose which can be absorbed by the blood.

These are a few of the many enzymes. Every one you see has an important part to play in promoting digestion. By the addition of water, or rather by the union of the water and food material, the thing we have eaten is made available for our good.

Much more could be said about this line. However, I hope I have answered the question asked in such a way as to prove informative to my correspondent. If not, come again!

Dinner Stories.

"Have you ever regretted entering public life?"

"Never," answered Senator Sorghum. "I have served my country and it has proved reasonably liberal in tipping the waiter."

He—"If looks could kill, it would be suicide for you to use a looking glass."

Mr. Charles Schwab asked a colored porter who had often attended him the average tip he received and was told: "One dollar, sah." When Mr. Schwab was about to leave he handed the man that amount, whereupon the porter was profuse in his gratitude. "Thank you, sah, thank you," he said with a low bow. "You are the only gentleman what ever comes up to the average."

"Do you regard the theater as a means of public education?"

"Yes," answered Miss Cayenne. "It teaches us that politeness must restrain us from telling everything we happen to be thinking about."

WOMEN IN THE CABINET.

A movement is on foot to induce Mr. Hoover to appoint at least one woman to his cabinet. Various names have been mentioned, as possibilities; but who she is or what her qualifications are does not seem to be of so much importance as the fact that she is not a man. The aim is to create a precedent, whether the appointee has the necessary qualifications for the office or not.

A premature demand by women for sex representation in office would seriously damage their future prospects. The vast majority of women see this; and seeing it they have not encouraged a woman's party in national politics, as distinguished from man's parties. A small and articulate minority persists in its efforts to divide the electorate into two camps, accordingly as the electors wear skirts or trousers.

The same fatal misconception of the status of women in politics prompts the demand for a woman in the cabinet, whether or not she has the training and experience necessary to make her an efficient adviser to the president on national and international affairs. Those who are working to that end have learned nothing from the mistake made in granting the franchise to a generation of emancipated slaves wholly unprepared to exercise it intelligently. The burden of that mistake fell most heavily upon the colored people themselves. A similar result must be expected from forcing women into office before they are prepared to give a good account of themselves therein.

"I did not run as a woman," says Congresswoman Ruth Hanna McCormick, "but as a candidate with qualifications for office." That should be the test for all political office, appointive as well as elective. Women played an important part in the recent elections, but they did it as citizens and not as women. There are possibly women in this country with the necessary qualifications for a cabinet office. They should not be overlooked because they are women; but neither should they be given special consideration on that account. As fast as women, who have been voting only eight years, show that they are qualified for the honors to which they aspire their abilities should be given recognition—and not before.—Detroit Free Press.

THE RHINELAND.

The question of withdrawing the occupying troops from the Rhineland and the problem of reparations—whether these things are quite unrelated, as Germany says, or only accidentally related or essentially related, as others say—are occupying all the attention of the League council at Lugano. Now that the legal meaning of the treaty of Versailles in regard to the occupation of the Rhineland has been deaned by Sir Austen Chamberlain there is no hope of inducing the government to change their mind upon that subject; all that we can hope and work for is a speedy settlement of the reparations proolem in order to enjoy the sequel of an early withdrawal from the Rhineland. We know exactly what Sir Austen Chamberlain himself desires—the earliest possible withdrawal—but it has been his fault or his misfortune that he has seemed to admonish those of his friends and followers who were doing their best to forward his policy.

The different interpretations of the relevant passages in the treaty of Versailles make a painfully interesting study. Last week we quoted article 431, upon the meaning of which controversy has been concentrated. This article says: "If before the expiration of the period of fifteen years Germany complies with all the undertakings resulting from the present treaty the occupying forces will be withdrawn immediately." Sir Austen stated in the house of commons last week that the government were advised—by their lawyers, we suppose—that this article meant there could be no withdrawal until Germany had "completely executed and discharged the whole of her reparation obligations." We should have thought that the words might mean that there would be a withdrawal when Germany had pledged herself to full payment. Indeed to many people that seems the more natural interpretation.

On the interpretation of the treaty which Sir Austen accepts the allies might well stay in the Rhineland for at least thirty years and perhaps for more than sixty years.—London Spectator.

New York Day by Day.

BY O. O. McINTYRE.

New York, Jan. 2.—Stage censorship in New York seems just around the corner. Even worthy producers who forget it have come to believe the stage must be purged to survive. The growth of censored talkies also alarms. This season marked the high tide of shameless passages and gestures. Even a tinsel red ass ask any one what that indicates.

While it was generally true only clean plays endured, there were certain producers who continued to exploit sheer muck with a disgusting bravado. Everything was put across with a crude and raw vulgarity and nothing was left to the imagination.

Inestimable patrons not at all squeamish found themselves making for the exit in the middle of an act. Mae West's production of "The Pleasure Man," glorifying the prostitute of yesterday we used to speak of only in whispers, was not so far in advance of its many contemporaries.

She merely capitalized and dragged into the open a disgusting theme that has been subtly disguised in many plays. There were three plays featuring those peculiar, mannerly dressed and mannered ladies who are also mentioned only in medical tomes.

Still another openly showed the exterior view of a wash room with players passing in and out, making suggestive remarks. In the same production more than thirty gutter epithets were mouthed that no respectable newspaper would dare think of printing.

It is agreed the theater has become broader-minded. Fifteen years ago a single defamatory name caused many ladies to swoon in the aisle at the production of Clyde Fitch's "The City." But most people still believe sewage should run under ground.

A stage cluttered up with nude ladies has been so novelty on Broadway for several years. The old wheeze of the fellow waiting on a Broadway corner for a reputed Gorgon because it had been so long since he saw a horse is not an exaggeration of the times. Censorship or jail is needed, if any one asks me—which they won't.

A couple of collegiate-garbed gentlemen in silk hats asked a blind street corner piccolo player the other night for the loan of his piccolo. One of them expertly rendered several tunes as a crowd gathered while the other passed his hat. Quite a sum was wheedled out of spectators.

"You are not so poor now," said the hat passer, stuffing a roll of bills into the blind man's hand.

"Nor so blind, either," replied the beggar, lifting his black glasses to bestow a sly wink.

Broadway has many beggars employed by a syndicate. They are assured bed and board, no matter what the receipts, and a percentage of the take-in. In this way they are guaranteed a living and in cases of arrest or other difficulties the syndicate renders legal aid. Routes are assigned to them daily. Chinatown, incidentally, is one of the best assignments. Upper Fifth avenue, known as Millionaire's row, the poorest.

A racket is also being worked by girls who work in pairs. Their victims are shopkeepers. One girl makes a purchase and presents a check on which she receives a goodly amount of change. A telephone call to the bank establishes the worthiness of the check. But before it can be collected, the other girl presents a check that completely closes the account.

One of the most beautiful women I ever saw was an expert passer of bogus checks. The World's Biography.

BY GARRETT P. SERVISS.

When you know the name of a thing its interest for you is increased and this in turn of interest may result in your finding out the thing has unexpected usefulness for you. I have just been reading of the employment of signboards by the Geological Society of Ardmore in Oklahoma to tell travelers something about the geology of the neighborhood, and particularly of the Arbuckle mountains, which are said to be a whole object lesson in geology. Dr. Charles N. Gould says that with the exception of glacial and volcanic phenomena, almost the entire gamut of geology may be observed in these mountains.

The Oklahoma scheme resembles the plan used in some parks, of attaching their names to specimens of different species and names of trees and plants. It is an excellent method of popular instruction in natural history. To speak of trees alone, there are no end of people who really need to be told that "this is an elm," "this is a white oak," "this is a red oak," "this is a hickory," "this is a sugar maple," "this is a soft maple," "this is a beech," "this is a birch," "this is an aspen," "this is a magnolia," "this is a pine," "this is a hemlock," "this is a cedar," "this is an arbor vitae," "this is a tulip tree," "this is a sycamore," "this is a horse chestnut," etc. And they not only need to be told, but they ought to be told. When you come upon a tree with whose name you are familiar, you really seem to be meeting a friend. But trees that are nameless to you are only trees—a mere mass of indiscriminate natural objects.

It is exactly so in geology. You read of granite, sandstone, limestone, basalt, serpentine, gneiss, slate, lava, eruptive rocks, foliferous rocks and sedimentary rocks—there is a whole great science back of these names, and depending upon their essential differences, but they may all be for you only so many names. The Oklahoma plan, if widely imitated, would go far to fill this gap in popular knowledge. It is good to look at specimens of natural objects in a museum, but it is better to see them where they exist in their natural places in the landscape.

The really intelligent man goes to school every day. All outdoors as well as all indoors forms his schoolhouse. But he needs many substitutes for text-books and teachers. These would be largely supplied by signboards, and labels placed upon objects to be found at the roadside or along paths and trails.

Some years ago I suggested the desirability of combining object lessons of this sort with public libraries and popular observatories scattered in enterprising towns all over the country. There should be a small astronomical telescope at every public library, together with a collection of the characteristic minerals, rocks, fossils, etc., of the neighborhood, and all remarkable natural outcrops of geological formations should be marked, and as it were, annotated with scientific information of a popular, but strictly accurate character.

One of the greatest virtues of auto touring has yet to be developed. It is the opportunity which the long reach and rapid movement of the auto affords for obtaining not only a birds eye view of the geology and physiography of the country, but likewise by no means insignificant acquaintance with the details of natural scenery. We cover battlefields with monuments marking the incidents of some bloody struggle of men with their fellowmen, but we leave entirely unmarked, and for the greater part unnoticed, hundreds of plots—often lying alongside the most traveled highways—where nature has plainly stamped her story of the mighty throes whereby the world was brought out of chaos, and has left vestiges of the origin and development of all the living creatures that now swarm upon the planet earth, making it a notable speck in the universe.—Copyright, 1929, International Feature Service, Inc.

The Way of the World.

BY GROVE PATTERSON.

Dispatches tell about a Kansas City woman who smashed a saloon. She was a wife and mother and believed she had good reason. Reminds the writer of the old days of Carrie Nation. Few remember this pleasant-voiced little old lady who used to smash up bars with axes in Kansas and elsewhere. The writer had a long interview with her once and found her to be kind and hopeful of a better day. She believed deeds mightier than words in bringing temperance. Were she here today she would be pleased by the eighteenth amendment but she would doubtless be doing something about the manner in which it is not enforced.

Speaking of interviews and kindly people, there was none more kindly than Eugene Debs, several times Socialist candidate for president. Debs finally was sent to jail for making a speech, all of which furnishes a chapter in which the United States government need feel no pride. Debs had a big heart. He earnestly hoped and worked for a happier world. When he was mistaken he was mistaken. He was never anything else. The writer remembers a two-hour Sunday afternoon talk with him in the cheap room of a cheap hotel. And he found Debs a gentleman unafraid.

Farmers especially in the Northwest are hardly happy. They want more relief from their financial troubles than congress will ever be able to give. Word comes now that the dairymen of Minnesota in a year produced $113,000,000 worth of butter. That's some money. Who gets all this money that farmers and dairymen produce? Can it be true that farmers are doing better than we are suspected, or is somebody else getting most of it? Those of us who live in towns know food is high enough to hurt.

A few years ago it was disclosed that the Methodist Episcopal church paid out $35,000,000 in salaries in a year, despite the fact there were only 218 churches that paid $5,000 a year or over. Today the situation as to salaries is a little improved in most denominations. The fact remains that the average clergyman is sadly underpaid for the long hours and the wear and tear on his nervous system. Comforting the sick, sitting up with the dying, burying the dead, bearing on their hearts the burdens of scores of their parishioners, and trying to find time to prepare sermons that will satisfy the self-appointed critics of the congregation is a job that can hardly be paid for in money.

An Unusual Romance of Love and Sacrifice

BY HAZEL LIVINGSTON

CHAPTER FIFTY-SIX

THERE was always a little stir in the office when Ralph McKevitt came in. "Hello everybody! How's everything?"

Commonplace words, but there was sufficient commonplace in the delicious ordinariness of intimacy he managed to put all of himself, and the way his glance went admiringly, warmly, from one girl to the other. A little secret message . . . "You and I understand each other, don't we?"

"He sure has a way with him, hasn't he, honey?" Mrs. Hobbs, the telephone operator sighed, after he had disappeared in Greely's private office.

Miss Yardley opened her vanity and added a little more rouge to her lips but I think Miss Haines is an awful fool to take him seriously. A man like that isn't going to marry a working girl."

"You're darn right, honey," Mrs. Hobbs agreed. But she powdered her nose and straightened her hair anyway. She wanted to be looking her best when he went out. You never can tell . . .

But it was a long while before he left Mr. Greely, and for once he failed to say goodbye to them when he hurried through the office, hands in his pockets, hat pulled over his angry eyes.

"Another row with the old man," Mrs. Hobbs mouthed, taking care that the office boy stumping envelopes in the corner wouldn't hear.

Old Mr. Greely rang viciously for Daphne, who in her small private office had missed the news as usual.

She came obediently, bringing her notebook and pencils.

The old man continued to walk up and down, taking no notice of her, and she waited patiently, not in the least disturbed by his red, angry face and furious gestures. Even his muffled cursing didn't disturb her any more, she hadn't been his secretary nearly a year for nothing.

"He's a fool, I tell you!" he shouted finally, waving his long arms at her. "A blankety-blank, blank fool!"

"Who is, Mr. Greely?"

"Young McKevitt," he said after a long pause, and went and sat at his desk, exhausted by his passion. Daphne got him a glass of water, and he wiped his perspiring forehead and said a little more gently, "Young men aren't what they used to be, Daphne . . . you should have lived 40, 50 years ago . . . those were the days. Men were men, and women were women, and no having to look twice to see which was which. You'd have looked well, my girl, with woman's dress, and the hair on your head God meant you to have, and none of this bobbed hair nonsense, young girls running around trying to look like tired business men with their necks shaved like burglars and their mouths painted like . . . hmm . . . what was I saying about young McKevitt? . . . "

"You said he was a fool," Daphne said, smiling, and wondering miserably whether the joy of being able to talk about Ralph compensated for the pain of hearing Mr. Greely rail against him. Why couldn't he see his good points, why couldn't he feel his charm, all too obvious to her?

The old man studied her shrewdly. Twice he seemed about to speak, but the mumbled words never got beyond his stubby gray moustache.

"Get along with you, and leave me alone. I'm in no mood to dictate," he said at last.

She picked up her note book, inexplicably disappointed. He had been about to say something. Something, she felt intuitively, that would have mattered very much to her.

At the door she turned back, paused for a moment. Hoping her would change his mind.

"You don't understand Ralph," she said, when it was plain he was not going to speak. "He isn't perfect—but he's a man—a real man—"

The old man was staring at her with a curious, impersonal intensity, his fierce, deep-set eyes burning with some inner fire. She found herself unable to go on. For the first time in her life, Daphne was afraid of John Greely. His ravaged, thin old face had the pitiless, terrible look of some beaked bird of prey.

She knew, suddenly, what Ralph had meant when he called him an old devil. Why the girls didn't envy her her job as his private secretary. Why Mr. Sanderson and Mr. McMurtrie and all their world entered his presence with self conscious coughs, and clearing of throats . . .

She had heard the things they had said about him, the things that were whispered on California st., but she had never believed them before. He had never been the arrogant, powerful John Greely to her . . . just Mr. Greely who was getting old, and had been kind to her . . .

He must have guessed what she was thinking. He half smiled, and then he said, quite gently, "You are very young, Daphne . . . By the way, I've changed my mind about that special work you were doing for me. I told you that you could take your time, I was wrong. I want it finished, with the utmost speed."

At 5:30 when the others had gone Daphne was still at her typewriter, working hard on Allan's dry old papers.

"I didn't say for you to work overtime!" the old man growled, looking in on her as he prepared to go home.

"Oh I just want to finish this part of it—but I'll be through in a little while, and I'm not tired, really!"

He looked at her quizically. "Contrary, eh? All right, have it your own way. I'll send the car back for you in an hour. That will give you time to eat a chclocate eclair or whatever you eat for dinner, and still get home at a reasonable hour. Or how would you like to eat with Sister Anne and me tonight? Will you come? I'll tell them to put an extra cup of water in the soup!"

He was so good natured and friendly again, so different from the harsh John Greely of the morning, that she cried impulsively, "Oh, I'd love to come," before she thought of the big Greely house, and the butler, and pompous little Mrs. Colby, and added hastily, "but I couldn't possibly come tonight!"

"Well, some other evening," he mumbled, not pressing her. "But I'll have the car back for you in hour—at the main entrance."

He clumped away, and after he had gone she discovered that the few minutes work she wanted to finish, was really the matter of half a day, and she yawned, and wondered what Mrs. Colby was having for dinner, and wished she had accepted, and yawned again . . .

"I'm too tired to work," she decided. "I'll go over to the cafeteria and have roast beef and baked potato, and ice cream, I don't care if it is expensive . . . And won't it be fun, having a chauffuer and a big car waiting! I wonder what Mrs. Halliday will say if she sees me!"

She was still smiling to herself when she had gained the street, and was going to cross over to her favorite cafeteria.

An arm slipped through hers, a familiar voice said in her ear, "I've been waiting an hour for you!"

Her heart plunged. She looked up, unable to believe her senses. "Ralph! Were you really and truly waiting for me?"

Her obvious delight mollied him a little. "Yes, and it seems the only way to see you. When I call at the office, I'm told that you and Greely are in conference, and can not be disturbed."

"Ralph—they didn't tell you that!"

She was laughing, but he wasn't. "I'll discuss that part later. We're going to have dinner now, and then we're going to go for a ride and have some more conversation. I've been doing a lot of thinking, Daphne. In a way I'm responsible for you, since I got you that job at Greely's . . . well, let's eat first, time to go into that after dinner."

He was hurrying her along as he spoke, striding along through the crowded street, so that she almost had to run, to keep up. A big car stopped to let them pass at a crossing, and she thought with a sinking heart, of Greely's car, coming back for her at 6:30 . . . just the one night she didn't want it . . .

They passed a public telephone station, and sh tried to stop, pulling at Ralph's arm—"Just one minute—so that I can telephone!"

Less risk of "flu" if you do two things

Precautions you can take immediately

"THERE is no use worrying every time you draw a breath for fear you will breathe in some influenza germs. Do the following two things and forget it: First, keep your nose and throat well protected, and second, keep your system in good condition. The chances are you will avoid contagion.

"As a first precaution, I am prescribing Mistol to all my patients, as it protects the nose and throat against the germs of influenza. Use it every morning, the first thing, before you go out. Again when you come home at night. Don't be afraid to use it freely; it will do no harm.

"Just tilt your head back and apply Mistol with the special dropper which comes with every package, until you feel it trickling down your throat. It will clear your head wonderfully, relieve any inflammation; it will help dry up a running nose. It has a soothing effect on the throat, too. Gargle it for a sore throat or a little irritating cough. Above all, it protects the nose and throat against the germs of influenza.

"This is the first precaution; now for the second: Physicians agree that, particularly in times of epidemic, weakening of the system due to purging by laxatives and cathartics is not advisable; therefore, many doctors are prescribing Nujol. It is not a laxative or cathartic but a pure, natural substance that helps your system function at all times the way nature intended it to. Like pure water, it is harmless. In no case does Nujol cause weakening of the system. Take it night and morning; it will keep you in first class condition. You will have a far better chance to resist "flu" or any other diseases that are going the rounds.

Takes no chances

"The combination treatment of Nujol and Mistol is a double safeguard against colds and influenza. Start this wise twofold precaution now. Don't delay. Put worry out of your mind. The chances are good that you will escape influenza and colds. Nujol and Mistol are on sale at all druggists."

Jubilee's Pardner

A Story of Boyhood Adventure

BY JUDD M. LEWIS

IT wasn't so cold this morning and I told Jubilee before I got out of bed and let him down that I had went to school almost every day this year so far, and he wagged his tail like he understood, but he was only bluffing. I know him.

When I got the ashes emptied and the fires fixed it was light enough for me to see all around, and the wind that blowed night before last and all day yesterday had made a big drift in the corner by the barn back of the swing where it makes one every year. I got the milk pail full of water and took my hand and flirted a lot of water all over the snow so that if it should freeze there would come a crust on it and we can dig out the inside of it and make a snow house, and when I got through my hand was as cold as a ghost's. I had to take my hand in the house and warm it before I could milk with it, and then when I was going to the barn someone hollered "Yoo-hoo!" and here came the whole bunch. They were playing follow the leader and the leader was the Lost Rag of Tripe, and he ran and dove head first into my snow drift, and all the others had to follow him. The snow was holding the water I had just put on it so that it was like a wet sponge, and they all came up with the wet snow hanging to them, and the joke was on them. But I won't have any more snow house than a rabbit unless we get another drift.

My grandfather wants to go fishing through the ice on the lake. He goes out there with a soap box and a hatchet and some fish lines and bait and chops a hole in the ice big enough to pull a whale through and all he ever pulls through it is a clothespin. When he has got the hole chopped he hangs a line through it and sits by it on the soap box till his whiskers are froze white and his feet feel like clubs and he looks like Santa Claus.

My ant says that a man who will set over a hole in the ice all hunched up and freezing to death when he has got a fire and a easy chair and every comfort in the world ought to have his head looked after by an osteopath. I asted my mother what is an osteopath and it is a bone doctor. My grandfather said, "There is one too many easy chairs in some homes and one too many gosh darned females. If you was a man I'd poke you one." My ant looked pleased and said, "No you wouldn't. If I was a man I would smoke and chew and spit tobacco juice around and be as big a liar as you are, and you would like me." All my grandfather could say was that if he ever caught a fish like her he would throw it back.

A fool doesn't so often say a wise thing as something that's so.

Love's Awakening

The Heart Story of a Woman's Lasting Affections

BY ADELE GARRISON

Mary Herself Posing as "Janet Rawdon"

FOR a long minute I looked at the envelope addressed "Miss Janet Rawdon, Box ——, Southampton, L. I., New York," and the blotted bank deposit slip with the same name written at the top, which Katie had put into my hands. Then I looked up at my justly triumphant little maid, standing above me now in her excitement.

"Then," I said, "then, there is no 'Janet Rawdon.' Mary has been sending this money to herself under that name and has opened an account in a Southampton bank as 'Janet Rawdon.'"

"Sure thing," she returned. "Vot I tell you? Ve all blind, blind!"

"Indeed we have been," I returned, "and we have been most unjust to Mary. We owe you a great deal, Katie, for your cleverness in solving this problem for us. You have saved me a great deal of mental worry, and I thank you so much."

I am prepared for almost anything from Katie, but I did not expect to see her burst into a storm of sobs, the while she snatched my hand and covered it with hysterical kisses.

"I so glad I could feex dees for you, 'cause I so bad by you after dot day ven I first coom back from Southampton.

"I get mad ven you no steeck around vile I tell you someting, und I sulk like leetle mad dog for days und days. Dot no vay to treat boss who goot to me like you vas."

Secretly I agreed with her, for she had been most trying in her sullen insolence during the days of our preparations for the Brixton visit. But I felt just now as if Katie had atoned for every dereliction since she had entered my employ, and I slipped a comforting arm around her.

"Don't think of that again," I commanded. "If you didn't do as you think you ought, you certainly have made up for it with what you have done today. Come now, stop crying and, tell me, do you think Mary has suspected you were not what you pretended to be?

She wiped her eyes, sniffled a bit and then was herself again.

"I sure she no tink nodings about me only to hif," she said earnestly. "You see, she in sooch hurry to get ondt of post office und bank before dot Meester Jackson get back dot she no haf time tink anyting else but feexing dose tings."

I turned back to the envelope and the slip.

"Did you say these were written with her left hand?" I asked.

"Yah. I see her," Katie responded.

"Have you those pieces of blotter pasted together?" I asked.

"Yah, I get deem," she answered, and left the room, returning a minute later with the cleverly pasted circular piece of blotter. I took it and compared the blotter address left by the envelope with the envelope itself. Unmistakably they were the same.

"May I have these, Katie?" I asked with perfunctory courtesy.

"Sure ting. Vot I vant mit dem?" she answered. "Here, I wrap dem in paper for you." Den nobody see you mit dem."

She deftly wrapped them in a piece of newspaper and I took them gratefully.

"There is only one thing more, Katie," I said. "I do not wish you to say anything of this to anyone, not even to Jim, unless I give you permission."

"Vot you take me for?" she demanded indignantly. "I no sleva, let flour froo. I get tings for you. I fit dem to you, I forget everyting. Dot way goot detectif do, und I tell you I take me 20 lessons correspondence school und get me goot diploma."

BEWARE THE COUGH FROM COLDS THAT HANG ON

Coughs from colds may lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a medical discovery with two-fold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for coughs from colds and bronchial irritations. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the inflamed membranes and stop the irritation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of coughs from colds, bronchitis and minor forms of bronchial irritations, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. (adv.)

WISE KNUTE

THERE is a mixed feeling in Ohio State football circles today following the announcement of Knute Rockne that he is not considering accepting a coaching job at the Buckeye school

Followers of Notre Dame breathed a sigh of relief when the announcement was read while Ohio State fans were disappointed when their fondest hopes were blasted

In the writers opinion Rockne showed his usual good judgment in refusing the Ohio job No matter how good a coach is he cannot turn out winning teams year after year If Rockne had accepted the job and then lost a few games, then Staters down town coaches would have raised a grand yell for a new mentor

PRIZE "BONERS"

THE Merkle of football

That is the name that will stick to Roy Riegels throughout his Riegels pulled the star "boner" of football history Tuesday when he handed Georgia Tech the national grid title on a silver platter by running the wrong way down the field In a dazed condition the University of California star picked up a fumble and ran 70 yards toward the Georgia goal before being stopped by one of his own men six inches from the line A blocked punt then gave Tech the victory

That one was almost as bad as the high school youth who scored a touchdown after a run of 110 yard The player in this case ran to the wrong goal and finding his mistake reversed and ran an additional 100 yard to score

There is a story told of Bally Compton coach of Harding high school Compton attended Wittenberg where he gained considerable fame as a football player Several seasons ago the Lutherans tangled with the Bishops and Compton in accused of running interference for Staten Wesleyan back

THIS TELL THIS

IT was not exactly a boner on Comptons part but a case of smart football playing by Staten It happened like this Wesleyan was against its own goal posts and the logical and expected thing to do was punt. The play was started but instead of punting Staten circled around Compton playing the other end saw what was happening and he attempted to cut off the Bishop star

On the 25 yard line Compton made his first stand Staten immediately cut the other way The race down to field was a series of cuts and reverses on Staten parts and stops and starts by Compton Although Compton was in front of his man all the time he could not stop him and Staten scored after a 100 yard run

Merkle has built a outstanding goat, but John McGraw a National League pennant one year by failing to touch second base Sport history is filled with many such amusing incidents Riegels misplay will be hard to live down and whenever his name is mentioned it will always be remembered

Tex Rickard Will Direct Fight Arrangement from Bed in Hospital; Ticket Sales Start Feb 1

NEW YORK, Jan 3—Although it will be at least a month before Tex Rickard can take up the heavier burdens of organizing and ballyhooing his heavyweight extravaganza at Miami Beach there will be no postponement of the date for the Sharkey Stribling quarrel which is set for Feb 22

Word came from the stricken promoter last night to this effect The irrepressible Tex from his hospital bed told Mrs. Rickard to convey to Colonel Hammond general manager of Madison Square Garden the compliments of the season and an announcement that the fight will positively take place according to plans and specifications worked out by Rickard before he was suddenly stricken by the Appendix

Colonel Hammond had expressed a doubt earlier as to whether the "pioneering" at the fight usually conducted solely by Rickard could be handled effectively by subordinates Rickard however insists he will be able to assume all direction of his lieutenants within a week and expects to be on his feet by Feb 1, when the ticket sale begins and the fighters pitch their training camp in Florida

BABE BETTER AFTER TOY IS REMOVED

Physicians Use Instrument; Incision and Anesthetic Not Required

CINCINNATI, Jan. 3—Baby Frank Brooks, 18-month-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Brooks, Asco, W. Va., is recovering here today following the removal of a toy motorcycle, an inch and a half long, from his throat late yesterday. The baby swallowed the toy about three weeks ago while eating candied popcorn, in which the toy had been inserted as a prize.

Physicians inserted an esophagus-scope in the child's throat and withdrew the obstruction. Anesthetic was not used and the process required only a minute. An incision was not required.

Delay in removing the toy was caused by the child's weakened condition which resulted from delay in getting him to the hospital here. Frank was first taken to Bluefield, W. Va., where surgeons were unable to aid and advised his removal here. Pneumonia developed shortly after his arrival here and because of his inability to take solid food he regained strength slowly, eating only liquid food and medical nourishment.

The case attracted wide attention. Telegrams and letters offering advise as to means of removing the toy were received from persons all over the country. One person in San Francisco went so far as to telephone, according to nurses.

Safer—something few men are able to do in silence.

Weather More Fitting For April Than Santa's Month Is December Record Here

DEAR, delightful old December; not only does it give us Christmas, but it also heralds gay New Years. But from a weeather standpoint it doesn't do so well, according to records at the local government weather station.

Rain, which should justly be relegated to April, seems to play an important part in the stage play, "December," presented once a year in Marion and vicinity, with "Rain" generally in the leading role. "Snow," which is generally identified in story books with the month, somehow doesn't get here very often.

No one should complain, though, for there was less rain here this year, by a fraction of three one-hundredths of an inch, than last year. This December, 2.87 inches fell, comparing with 2.90 inches in 1927. But these statistics register mere puddles of water when compared with the 5.39 inches in 1911.

Temperature Averages High

Marion didn't shiver with cold in December this year, most of the days registering from 40 degrees up to 58 degrees. Just once did the thermometer take a serious tumble, and then it went way down to seven degrees above the zero mark.

In December of 1927 two days were colder than seven degrees above, one of them going to six degrees above and another to four degrees. Whether four, seven or six, people began to consider alcohol for the family car when the thermometer hovered near the zero line.

The local postoffice blamed part of the delay in mailing to the fact that it wasn't cold enough for the mailing public to realize that Christmas was upon them. On this day of days, it was 50 degrees warmer than it should have been to make a real Christmas, and at night, the mercury fell only 20 degrees lower. On the thirty-first of the month, which should have been the forerunner of a happy, glorious New Year, the thermometer was still hovering around the 45 mark, falling only to 24 degrees.

1917 Makes Record

But, in 1917, a minimum temperature of 13 degrees below zero was reached in December, and the year before there was 16.5 inches of snow, so that at some time in the city's history, the holiday buyers waded in snow and froze their feet doing the rounds of purchasing.

According to the weather statistics in December, there should be approximately six clear days, nine partly cloudy days, 16 days cloudy and nine days with rain. In 1928, the record runs like this: Eight clear days, 12 partly cloudy days, 11 cloudy days and four days of actual rain and traces of rain on one day.

Not the month that tradition makes it, and no month for Santa and his reindeers, was December of 1928, but withal, there could be worse days than the ones selected to play their part in last year's production of the annual play, "December."

J. T. HUGHES RITES CONDUCTED AT RADNOR

Funeral services for John Thomas Hughes, 76, were held this afternoon at 2 o'clock at the Radnor Congregational church. The Rev. Mr. Harris, former pastor of the Radnor church, was in charge, assisted by the Rev. Mr. Peters, present pastor at Radnor. Interment was made in Radnor cemetery. Mr. Hughes passed away at the home of his son, William, at Morral Monday afternoon after about eight weeks of ill health.

KEEP LOOKING YOUNG

The secret of keeping young is to feel young—to do it you must watch your liver and bowels—there's no need of having a sallow complexion—dark rings under your eyes—pimples—a bilious look in your face—dull eyes with no sparkle. Your doctor will tell you ninety per cent of all sickness comes from inactive bowels and liver.

Dr. Edwards, a well known physician in Ohio, perfected a vegetable compound mixed with olive oil as a substitute for calomel to act on the liver and bowels, which he gave to his patients for years.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets are gentle in their action yet always effective. They bring about that natural buoyancy which all should enjoy by toning up the liver and clearing the system of impurities.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets are known by their olive color, 15c, 30c and 60c.—Ac

Stirring Campaign Features Memorable Year In Politics

36,000,000 VOTES CAST IS HIGH MARK

Hoover Swept Into Office on Crest of Overwhelming Victory

CONGRESS CHANGES

Prosperity, Religion, Prohibition Factors in G. O. P. Win

BY GEORGE R. HOLMES
Marion Star Staff Writer

WASHINGTON, Jan. 3—A memorable year in American politics was 1928.

All presidential campaign years are memorable, involving as they do the selection of a new chief executive, a new congress, in fact a whole new government. But 1928 was particularly so, for it witnessed the most stirring presidential race in the history of the country—a contest that for the first time in the 150 years of our national life saw the injection of two such firebrand issues as religion and prohibition into a great national political campaign.

If for no other reason 1928 would pass into history as one of the most important and significant of our political epochs.

There are other reasons. For one thing, 1928 marked the high-tide of American political interest, due to the introduction of issues never before raised, and the picturesque personalities of the two great candidates.

36,000,000 Voters

The world never before witnessed such a spectacle as was presented in the United States on the sixth of last November when approximately 36,000,000 free men and women marched to the polls and registered their choice for a leader. No such electoral army ever was mobilized before. It may be years before another such spectacle will be seen, notwithstanding increasing population and the quadrennial rise in popular voting in America.

It was a year of Republican triumph, for Herbert Hoover, the Quaker, was elected to the presidency, polling approximately 21,000,000 popular votes, as against some 15,000,000 for his Democratic and Catholic opponent, Gov. Alfred E. Smith of New York. The exact figures on the popular vote of Nov. 6 are still unavailable as this is written, so difficult is the feat of tabulating some 36,000,000 ballots.

Governor Smith was the first Catholic ever nominated for the presidency by a major political party; similarly, Mr. Hoover was the first Quaker ever nominated for the office.

Republican Congress

Mr. Hoover carried into office with him an overwhelming Republican congress, and swept to victory as well, a majority of the governors of states and state legislatures. All told, it was about as decisive a political victory as the country ever saw. The Hoover vote in the electoral college was 444, as against 87 for Governor Smith. The Hoover vote exceeded Woodrow Wilson's record-breaking total of 435 in 1912 the year of the Republican split. It exceeded, too, the wildest dream of his managers and political prognosticators generally.

Still another reason why the politicians of the future will put a red circle around 1928 is that the year saw the break-up of the so-called "solid south," which up to Nov. 6 was composed of those 10 states south of Mason and Dixon's line which had never cast their vote for a Republican presidential candidate—Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina, Florida, Georgia, Mississippi, Alabama, Texas, Louisiana and Arkansas.

Hoover shattered the solid south to smithereens carrying four of the states, Texas, North Carolina, Virginia and Florida, and polling in the other six popular totals such as no Republican ever rolled up before.

Carried 40 States

In all, Hoover carried 40 of the 48 states; Smith but eight—South Carolina, Georgia, Alabama, Mississippi, Arkansas, Louisiana, Massachusetts and Rhode Island.

And yet despite the strong Republican sweep, the Democrats can still—and do still—"point with pride" at some of the results of this memorable election. Their candidate polled nearly twice as many popular votes as any Democrat ever polled before. And they can point, too, to the fact that the redistribution of some 400,000 of these same votes in states that were close would have resulted in the election of Governor Smith.

Politicians will be arguing for years to come over the 1928 election—what caused the unprecedented Republican victory; the smashing Democratic defeat; the pros and cons of putting religion and prohibition into a national campaign; whether it will ever be possible to elect a Catholic or a Jew to the presidency; the errors made on both sides from the standpoint of political strategy; what the breaking up of the solid south portends for the future, et cetera.

Most practical politicians believe that religion played a dominant role in the outcome. There are many who believe that had not Gov. Smith been a Catholic he would have been elected. There are others who ascribe his defeat to his open and avowed opposition to prohibition.

Prosperity Factor

However much these opinions differ, it is universally admitted that the prosperity of the country under the Coolidge administration was an all-powerful factor. The Republicans wisely stressed it, and stressed along with it that Mr. Hoover was in part responsible for this prosperity, and that he was pledged to continue the Coolidge policies.

Summing it all up, the consensus among politicians on both sides is that these were the most important factors in the outcome of the Smith-Hoover contest, in the order named:

1. The unprecedented prosperity of the country under Republican administrations for the preceding seven years.
2. Religion.
3. Prohibition.

All politicians agree that the woman vote was most decisive. Women who never exercised their newly given privilege of suffrage registered in astounding numbers and then went to the polls and voted. Many politicians agree that "it was the women who beat Smith" because of his wetness, his religion, and his Tammany affiliation."

As one of them phrased it, "the men voted for Hoover for business reasons, because the country was prosperous; the women voted against Smith because of his religion, his wetness and his brown derby."

Governor Smith conducted an energetic campaign, travelling some 15,000 miles on a special train, and making some twenty major speeches. He went as far west as Denver, as far south as Alabama.

Mr. Hoover travelled very little. He made his headquarters in Washington and made only infrequent rallies out to the stump.

Both candidates talked about farm relief; water power, the tariff; business prosperity, prohibition; foreign relations—while all the time the all-important virus of religious differences scuttled below the surface like a live thing.

Governor Smith dragged the religious issue into the open. At Oklahoma City, late in September, he defended his faith, and boldly challenged the justice and the democracy of opposing him politically because of it. It was the first time in the political history of the country that a major candidate for the presidency ever undertook to defend his religion on the stump. That was just another innovation and precedent in the memorable political year 1928.

The year also marked the passing of the Democratic party's historic position on the tariff. Almost from the birth of the two great parties, this tariff issue has marked the distinct line of cleavage between them. But at Louisville in October, Governor Smith kicked over all the old Democratic theories of free trade and tariff-for-revenue only and came flatly for protection.

An Epochal Year

One might go on indefinitely listing the political events, upheavals and over-turns of this astonishing year. The passage of such a notable figure as Senator Jim Reed of Missouri from the American political stage might be mentioned, for few men have played a more conspicuous part in the politics of his time. He chose to strike for the Democratic presidential nomination this year. He failed, and is retiring from the senate which he has burned and charmed for two decades.

One might mention the greatly increased part which the new science of radio played in the 1928 campaign, or the unprecedented spectacle of two great political conventions each choosing its candidate for the presidency on the first ballot, as was done at Kansas City and Houston in June.

But these events, important as they are, still are secondary to the epochal events of the most memorable year the country has ever known, save possibly one. That was the year of 1860 which saw Abraham Lincoln rise from obscurity or rural Illinois to win the Presidency at a time when the issues were as hotly debated and as warmly fought around every American fireside as they were this year.

Because the experience and suggestions gained from a million Super-Six owners led to the 64 improvements now introduced, the new Hudson is to be known as the Greater Hudson.
It is to this vast army of experts that this invitation to examine and drive the car and place upon it their appraisal is made. So emphatically does the Greater Hudson answer their wishes that we leave to them the verdict of its beauty, appearance, performance and value.
No car has ever held greater prestige from the standpoint of value. No car has been regarded as being better on the road or having such a satisfactory motor. In the Greater Hudson you will find that in these as well as other particulars a higher standard is set. No group of owners is better qualified to judge values. None know so well what smoothness and reliability—easy driving and easy riding means. So what they say of the Greater Hudson will be authoritative and conclusive. It is their judgment that we now invite.

Kennecott Doubles Low Price Set Up in 1928 Market

BULLETIN

BY W. S. COUSINS

NEW YORK, Jan. 3—The stock market rumbled along under a tremendous weight of speculative buying and selling today. The industrial stocks jumped buoyantly in the forenoon, only to run into another stone wall of profittaking and short selling as the day advanced, cutting down the price margins and in many cases wiping out a good share of yesterday's brilliant gains. It was evident in the third hour that the market would record the first 6,000,000 share session since the first week in December.

BY W. S. COUSINS

Financial Editor

NEW YORK, Jan. 3 — Industrial stocks were ready to climb further up the price scale at the first tap of the opening gong on the big board today. Stocks of the electrical manufacturing companies received a good boost on the report that New York Central would electrify its lines from New York to Buffalo. Though the report lacked confirmation, New York Central common stock jumped about five points to 193¼.

For the first time since the middle of December stock sales passed the 3,000,000-share mark in the first half-hour, setting up a pace which if continued would give a 10,000,000-share day. Numerous 5,000 to 10,000-share blocks of the motor, copper and electrical stocks passed over the tape.

Radio Corporation crossed 400 with a rush and sold up about 11 points at 404 in the first hour, clinching the year performance records of the new year. In less than a month Radio has recovered 131 points of the 145 dropped during the big shake out in early December, and the Radio bulls confidently predicted 500 for their stock before the end of January. Radio is closer to a real corner than any other stock on the big board just now, and any big demand for the few remaining shares will surely precipitate sky rocketing of this "rich mans speculation."

General Electric dropped 15 points of yesterday's late gains. Westinghouse sailed along to 146½, a new 6½ point jump as a market opener, but was unable to keep up the pace.

Kennecott exactly doubled the low price of 1928. All of the copper stocks were strong as a result of the 17-cent price for export copper, with still higher prices predicted. United States Steel common sold up about two points at 154, but the independent steels made little progress.

MAYOR OCHS TELLS OF ACHIEVEMENTS

Electrification of Kenton Waterworks Department an Outstanding Event

KENTON, Jan. 3—Plea for the continuance of the same harmony and of the program of economy, progressiveness and efficient service for the betterment of the city and its citizens, which characterized the city administration during 1928, was sounded by Mayor W. J. Ochs in his annual report to city council.

During the course of his lengthy message to the legislative group, the chief executive reviewed in brief the major activities of the administration during the past year.

Touching upon finances the mayor said that the Board of Sinking Fund trustees had retired bonds amounting to approximately $106,000 and that during 1929 the city tax rate would be 25.50 mills as compared with 28.10 for the year previous.

One of the outstanding accomplishments for the 12 month period, he pointed out, was the electrification of the city waterworks department, eliminating the old steam equipment, which has improved water service in general and has cut operating costs in the department 50 per cent effecting a saving of $25,000.

All departmental heads and assistants were commended by the mayor, including the police, fire department and street force. All, he pointed out, have cooperated in effecting strict economy with a minimum impairment of service to the highest degree to the public. He pointed out the absence of any major crimes and the small fire loss for the year.

TODAY'S REVIEW OF YESTERDAY'S GRAIN

CHICAGO, Jan. 3—The opening session of grain trading in the new year disclosed no marked change of sentiment in regard to the cereal futures. Interest continued quiet and prices held to a comparatively narrow range.

Wheat, after opening slightly easier in sympathy with weakness at Liverpool, rallied on short covering, some of which was to close spreads with corn. There were also reports of purchases by Northwest interests and Winnipeg was relatively firm.

Closing of the spreads between wheat and corn had a slightly adverse effect on prices of the latter. There was also some selling of the yellow cereal on reports of partial rains in Northern Argentina.

At the close wheat prices were 1-8c higher. Corn was 1 2@3-8c off; oats were unchanged to 1-8c higher; and rye was 1-8c up to 1-8c off. Winnipeg wheat futures finished 1-4@3-8c higher.

Liverpool's easiness was attributed to offerings of Argentina wheat. Broomhall says that while Argentina and Canadian wheats are being offered at small declines, there is no pronounced pressure.

In the local market the feature was the closing of spreads between wheat and corn, with the buying in wheat. The latter also led to considerable short covering and the market finished firm.

Cold weather over the major portion of the Winter wheat belt was preceded by snowfall in most sections. Illinois and Ohio received ample protection, advices said, while Kansas reported a good cover in the eastern half of the state and light in the west and northwest. Nebraska was the only state to report generally very little covering.

Canadian visible supply figures, for Canadian points only, showed another increase for the week—this time the figure was 4,743,000 bu. Total stocks now are approximately 36,000,000 bu more than a year ago, and bonded stocks are figured at 11,000,000 bu above a year ago.

Export trade continued quiet, although Italy was reported to have purchased some more durums. Despite the heavy world's shipments, denials that European stocks are piling up are being constantly received. In this connection Broomhall says he is of the opinion that there are no accumulations of imported wheat in consuming countries, although Central European countries are holding considerable native wheat.

While corn prices declined under the pressure of the backspreading with wheat, the lower prices attracted good support. There was some selling on the reports of rains in northern Argentina, but there was also some buying on a wire to a local house from New York export circles which said that continental cables indicated an early revival of the export demand for corn.

Nothing was heard of actual export sales, but Kansas City advices spoke of a large short interest still existing in gulf corn. Omaha advised of a good demand for spot corn at prices above a parity with Chicago. Locally spot corn was firm. Country offerings continued moderate with only 32,000 bu booked to arrive.

In the cash market wheat was unchanged in price; corn steady to ½c higher; oats steady to ¼c lower; rye and barley unchanged. Cars inspected: Wheat, 26; corn, 484; oats 57; rye, 12, and barley, 21.

"Rough" Ohioan Kidnaps, Beats Up Traffic Officer

WASHINGTON, Jan. 3—Carl Lassiter, a uniformer traffic officer, nursed a headache today while his mates searched for "George Moore," admittedly a tough citizen and supposedly from Ohio. It happened this way:

Lassiter was directing traffic last night at one of the busiest corners in the capital, Ninth and F sts. A small coupe came alongside and the driver asked for directions. The car bore Ohio tags of 1928, which expired Dec. 31. The conscientious officer decided to take the tourist to the station house for driving with dead tags.

As he got into the car, a gun was thrust against his ribs, the visitor in the city drove with his left hand, kept Lassiter covered with his right, and kidnaped him right out of the heart of the city. He drove to the outskirts of the district, compelled the officer to get out, bent him up and left him lying on the cold, cold ground, after firing a couple of shots just to show he meant business.

Lassiter was knocked out. He later recovered and was taken to the hospital while the rough, tough visitor to the city went on about his affairs. The officer reported he thought the number on the car was Ohio—E17280—1928.

GIRL, 22, SETS NEW RECORD FOR WOMEN

Bobbie Trout Stays in Air 12 Hours; Uses All of Her Fuel

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Jan. 3 — The world's record for sustained flight for women today was held by Bobbie Trout, 22-year-old aviatrix, who bettered the record recently set by Viola Gentry at Roosevelt field by some four hours. Miss Trout remained aloft in her tiny plane for 12 hours and 11 minutes.

When Miss Trout brought her plane to earth last night, every drop of fuel had been used. She apparently was not fatigued by her stay aloft and was mostly concerned about the oil smudges on her face.

Miss Trout is a former University of Southern California student. She has been flying less than a year. She was seriously injured in a crash once.

Viola Genty Will Make Another Try

NEW YORK, Jan. 3—Miss Viola Gentry, pretty young aviatrix who set an endurance flight record for women last month at Roosevelt field only to see it broken yesterday by Miss Evelyn "Bobbie" Trout in Los Angeles, will attempt to recapture the record late this month.

"I am going to Murfreesville, Va., today for a few days. Then I plan to take off on Jan. 26 in a real attempt to set a new record," she said this morning.

Miss Gentry showed no trace of jealousy in praising the feat of Miss Trout.

"That is just wonderful; it will do so much to encourage girls to take up flying," she commented upon hearing the news.

After her attempt to regain the endurance record, Miss Gentry will attempt a non-stop transcontinental flight to Los Angeles and then will hazard a transatlantic hop to Ostend Belgium, according to plans previously revealed through International News Service.

LOCAL MAN COUNSEL IN $1,075,430 SUIT

Howard T. Mitchell Attorney for Plaintiff in Action at Los Angeles

Howard T. Mitchell, former Marion resident, is attorney for the plaintiff in a suit for $1,075,430 filed several days ago in Superior court at Los Angeles, for E. Merill Fairchild, son of Orrin James Fairchild, 69, who was killed in an automobile accident.

The claim, according to newspaper reports, is one of the largest ever filed, in a personal injury suit in the Los Angeles court. The unusual amount of damages claimed is based on the assertion that Fairchild's death prevented sale of patent rights to a sound film device which he had invented.

The suit is against the Wreden Packing & Provision Co. Fairchild charges in his complaint that his father was killed by a Wreden truck a year ago and that the truck was speeding. It is alleged that an intoxicated man was riding on the seat with the driver.

LONG ILLNESS FATAL TO JOHN GWINNER

Retired Crawford County Farmer Claimed at Home in Bucyrus

BUCYRUS, Jan. 3—John Gwinner, lifelong resident of Crawford county and retired farmer, died at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Israel Fritz, 536 South Poplar st., with whom he had made his home for a number of years, this morning at 2:30 o'clock, after having been bedfast one year. Death was attributed to infirmities of age.

He was born in Germany, Aug. 20, 1845, emigrating to this country at the age of six, making his home in Crawford county since that time. He was married to Matilda Scott, who preceded him in death. Mr. Gwinner was the last surviving member of the family, two brothers and two sisters having preceded in death. Three sons, William, of Holmes township, Isaac of Sulphur Springs and Jay of Bucyrus, and one daughter, Mrs. Israel Fritz, survive him.

Funeral services will be held at the Fritz home at 1:30 o'clock Saturday, the Rev. Mr. Soger, pastor of the First Evangelical church, officiating.

Ritzy Rosalie

ROSALIE being very much of a law-observing citizen there is no occasion to question the contents of her glass. So you'll have to believe she is drinking gingerale even though she is wearing some of the new cocktail gloves. They are of soft white kid with bars and much gold piping. The cuffs may be worn turned down to reveal the contrasting brocade lining. — Copyright 1929, King Features Syndicate, Inc.

CITIZENS WARNED TO GUARD AGAINST FIRE

Overheated Furnaces Serious Menace Now, Chief McFarland Says

An appeal was issued today by Fire Chief T. J. McFarland to Marion residents to take every precaution possible to prevent fires.

"This is the worst time of the year for fires," declared the chief, "and so far we have been mighty lucky but we want to keep that way. Every one should be exceedingly careful and especially at this time of year.

"Overheated furnaces are the worst menace right now. So many persons have acquired the habit of sleeping in rooms without any heat. Before they go to bed all registers are closed except one or two. Furnaces are constructed to heat the entire house and when most of the registers are closed and a big fire is placed in the furnace for the night there is danger of fire."

Some of the other "don'ts" issued by the chief are as follows:

"Don't store ashes in wooden or cardboard boxes."

"Don't let rubbish accumulate in the basement."

"Don't shovel ashes too near a wooden coal bin."

"Don't build a big fire in the furnace and then go away from the house."

Last year at this time the department had answered seven calls and this season only two have been answered, one a false alarm.

The department was summoned to the home of French Crow, 645 South Prospect st. at 8:20 o'clock last night. An over heated furnace caused the summons. There was no damage.
